The Authentic Flavours of Siena: A Journey through Gastronomic Tradition

Sieneese cuisine is a triumph of authentic flavours, deeply rooted in tradition and territory. Each dish tells the story of a land that has been able to preserve its culinary excellence, thanks to the use of simple but high quality ingredients.

Starters and Cheeses: The Taste of Tradition

A Sieneese meal often begins with a board of local cured meats, including finocchiona, a soft salami flavoured with fennel seeds, lardo, creamy and tasty, and prosciutto di Cinta Senese, a delicacy obtained from one of the oldest breeds of pig in Italy. This hors d'oeuvre goes perfectly with a glass of Chianti Colli Senesi, a harmonious and fruity red wine that enhances the flavours of the cured meats.

Next to the cold cuts, Sieneese pecorino cheese is another undisputed protagonist. Fresh, it has a soft and sweet texture, while matured it becomes more savoury and slightly spicy. It is perfect either eaten alone or combined with honey or fruit preserves.

First Courses: Simplicity and Taste

Sieneese cuisine best expresses its authenticity in its first courses, where a few ingredients give life to unmistakable and genuine flavours.

Pici, a symbol of the peasant tradition, are fresh pasta made by hand with just water and flour. Their thick and slightly rough texture makes them perfect for holding sauces and absorbing every nuance of flavour. Among the best known variants, pici all'aglione are seasoned with a simple but intense sauce made with tomatoes and garlic from the Val di Chiana, a particularly delicate and fragrant variety that gives the dish an unmistakable aroma without being too aggressive. Pici al ragù di Cinta Senese, on the other hand, offers a richer, stronger flavour. The ragout, prepared with the meat of this prized pig breed, is cooked for a long time with tomatoes, carrots, celery and red wine, resulting in a dense and enveloping texture.

Another iconic dish is ribollita, an ancient soup born from the ingenuity of peasant families, who reused stale bread together with black cabbage, cannellini beans, carrots and other seasonal vegetables. The name “ribollita” derives from the fact that the soup was prepared in large quantities and then reheated in the following days, intensifying the flavours. It is a rustic and tasty dish, perfect in cold weather and ideal with a glass of Rosso di Montepulciano, a young and lively wine that harmonises with the simplicity of the ingredients.

Another excellence of Sienese cuisine is tagliolini al tartufo bianco della Val d'Orcia, a refined and fragrant dish that celebrates one of the territory's most precious ingredients. The thin and delicate tagliolini are simply dressed with melted butter and flakes of white truffle, which releases its unmistakable earthy and enveloping aroma. The white truffle from this area is considered one of the best in the world and gives this dish an unparalleled elegance.

Every Sienese first course encapsulates a piece of history and tradition, best expressing the link between cuisine and territory. With simple and authentic ingredients, the local gastronomy continues to conquer anyone who is tempted by its unique flavours.

Main Courses: The Triumph of Sienese

For those who love stew dishes, ossobuco alla senese is a real treat. This veal shank is slowly braised with carrots, celery, onion and white wine until it becomes incredibly soft. The Sienese recipe is distinguished by the addition of lemon peel, thyme and sage, which give a fresh and fragrant note to the dish.

Game also has a place of honour in the Sienese tradition. Wild boar stew, prepared with a long marinade in red wine and spices before being slow-cooked with tomato and herbs, is a dish with a strong flavour reminiscent of the flavours of the Tuscan maquis.

The best match for these dishes is undoubtedly Brunello di Montalcino, a full-bodied and structured wine with elegant tannins that balance the spiciness of the dishes and enhance their robust character.

Sweets from Siena: A Heritage of Taste

The Sienese confectionery tradition is among the oldest and most renowned in Italy. Panforte, born in the Middle Ages, is a dough rich in dried fruit, honey and spices, perfect for festivities. Ricciarelli, marzipan biscuits with a soft heart and refined flavour, are another delicacy that is a symbol of the city. Cantucci, crunchy and rich in almonds, are traditionally eaten dunked in Vinsanto, the typical sweet wine of Tuscany, which perfectly rounds off every meal.

The lesser known but equally delicious Pan co' Santi, a sweet bread enriched with walnuts, sultanas and black pepper, is also a speciality worth trying, especially in the autumn months.

An Enogastronomic Heritage to Discover

Siena is not only a city of art and history, but also a gourmet's paradise. Every dish, from the simple country soup to the refined desserts, is a piece of a tradition that lives on and enchants anyone who ventures out to discover its flavours. Accompanied by the great wines of the province of Siena, these dishes offer an unforgettable gastronomic experience, where taste and culture are uniquely intertwined.

Radio commentary of the race

On March 8, the day of the cycling race, uRadio, the radio station for students of the University of Siena, will follow the emotions of the Strade Bianche 2025 live and, thanks to live connections from the route and from their headquarters, located in the courtyard of the Rectorate, (Banchi di Sotto, 55), listeners will experience the unique atmosphere of the competition.

uRadio will broadcast the race in real time, interviewing the protagonists of the cycling world and the spectators. Furthermore, the student radio will present a special podcast, entitled "On the Roads of Taste and Landscape", which will be dedicated not only to the race, but also to the scenic, cultural and gastronomic beauties of the territory crossed by the competition. Each episode will focus on one stage, telling local stories, traditions and curiosities, with interviews with cyclists, residents and enthusiasts.

The initiatives promoted by the University of Siena on the occasion of Strade Bianche 2025 are financed with the funds allocated with D.D. n. 1159/2023 "PRO - BEN Announcement - Notice for the granting of funding intended for the promotion of psychophysical well-being and to combat the phenomena of psychological and emotional distress of the student population".
